UM SLATES WORKSHOPS FOR MUSIC TEACHERS

University of Montana summer mid-session offerings of special interest to school music teachers include workshops in Music Literature for Young People and in Marching Band Techniques, according to Dean Charles W. Bolen of the School of Fine Arts. The workshops will be in session July 7-20, he said.

Music Literature for Young People will be taught by Miss Muriel Dawley, music consultant in elementary education in the Los Angeles public schools. The course will explore ways to help students listen to music with understanding and enjoyment.

Dr. David Whitwell, conductor of bands at the University, will present the band workshop. The course will cover history and philosophy of the marching band as well as aspects of performance and will emphasize the new Moffitt system of precision drill.

Details about these workshops and other UM summer music offerings may be obtained by writing to Dr. Joseph A. Mussulman, Department of Music, University of Montana, Missoula.
